Allotment unveils new defibrillator

After two years of trying, Van Ward Allotments has finally unveiled its new defibrillator after two people suffered a heart attack on site.

With support through Caerphilly County Borough Council and charity Jack's Appeal, the allotments on Castle Park, Caerphilly, unveiled the potentially life-saving equipment on Friday April 12.

Chair Tracey Davies was there and spoke to Caerphilly Observer: "We've been trying to sort this for a couple of years now but we didn't have any electric here to charge the batteries.

"The solar panels we installed have solved that problem, and we couldn't be happier to have this here."

The defibrillator itself is on the outside of the gate on Brookside Crescent, and will be available for public use.

Tracey continued: "Having had two people suffer heart attacks on the allotments, this will come as a reassurance to many, and we'll soon be running training sessions so people know how to use it."

June Thomas was also there for the launch, and knows the importance of defibrillator accessibility more than most.

June lost her son, Jack Thomas, in 2012 aged just 15-years-old to a still unknown heart condition.

Described as a "fit and healthy lad" by his mum, June launched Jack's Appeal in 2013, with the aim of putting defibrillators in every comprehensive school across south Wales.

To date, through Jack's Appeal, June has managed to install more than 260 defibrillators across several counties in south Wales.

Speaking to Caerphilly Observer, June said: "We first installed a defibrillator in Oakdale Comprehensive over ten years ago and it's been amazing to see how far we've come.

"There's now a defibrillator at every comprehensive school in Caerphilly, and we've also carried out over 1,700 heart screenings in young people which has saved many lives.

"This will hopefully never be needed, but it's always good to have one available."

Van ward councillor Elaine Forehead lost her father to a heart attack, she was at the unveiling and said: "This has taken some time to sort out, but we're so glad it's here.

"I only wish one of these were available when my father had his heart attack. We've made a lot of progress."

The new defib was unveiled by former chair Ray Hall, Cllr Elaine Forehead, current chair Tracey Davies, and founder of Jack's Appeal, June Thomas

Bin lorries need repairs

Bin lorries which collect food and garden waste in Caerphilly urgently need repairs, the council has warned.

Its organic recycling vehicles are already operating "beyond their economic life" and are "experiencing significant downtime due to continual repairs".

Caerphilly Council is preparing a new waste strategy, aimed at improving its recycling rates and avoiding costly Welsh Government fines.

But new collection arrangements for organic waste won't come into effect until 2027, meaning the council has to "bridge a gap" until then using its current lorries.

The council has warned of an "urgent need to ensure food and garden waste collections are not compromised during this three-year interim period".

Failing to keep up with collections at roughly 80,000 properties each week would cause "reputational damage" to Caerphilly Council, according to a new report.

At a meeting of the council's cabinet on Wednesday April 3, members approved spending £148,000 on urgent maintenance of the organic recycling fleet.

Chris Morgan, the cabinet member for waste, noted the council's recent progress in improving food recycling – such as supplying free caddy liners to residents – and told colleagues the "current unreliability" of the lorries "puts this success at risk".

Cabinet member Carol Andrews asked whether the "refurb will be enough to see us through" to 2027, when new collection systems for organic waste will come into force.

Marcus Lloyd, the council's head of infrastructure, said the council "should be able to get more efficiency out of the vehicles" during the interim.

Buying replacement lorries is not an option, according to the council report, because they would become "obsolete" under the new system in three years' time.

Community council's engagement award

A community council has won an award for organising activities to "improve the wellbeing" of residents.

Darran Valley Community Council has won the 'One Voice Wales Community Engagement Award' from Un Llais Cymru (One Voice Wales).

The council, which covers Deri, Fochriw, Groesfaen and Pentwyn, received the award from the organisation, which acts as the voice of community and town councils across Wales.

Community council clerk, Amanda Pallister, submitted the nomination and said: "Darran Valley Community Council is constantly looking for innovative, creative ways to engage and improve the wellbeing of its community.

"With a small budget and only one part-time clerk, it is something to be commended. I am nominating the council as clerk as I'm very proud of all the councillors – they always put the local community first and want to improve their quality of life.

"I live outside the area but am proud to be part of something that has the heart of the community at its essence. I would dearly love to see them recognised for this."

The award commended activities arranged by the council, including free Christmas pantomimes, the Santa on a fire engine event and play packs sent out during the pandemic.
